Substance Abuse Librarians and Information Specialists

April 2002

Dear SALIS Members and Friends:

SALIS welcomes you to its 24th Annual Conference in our Nation's Capital. Washington, DC has much to offer as an international city as well as national sources from which to capitalize for the value of knowledge sharing. We are pleased to have incorporated professional activities in this year's program, providing enhancement to our experiences as librarians and information specialists.

This year's theme is:

Capitalizing on the Value of Knowledge Sharing

Conference highlights include:

- Speakers: Dr. Ruth Sanchez-Way, Director of CSAP and Dr. H. Westley Clark, Director of CSAT.
- Gender difference issues and alcohol and drugs.
- A club drugs panel discussion.
- Several policy making and policy issues sessions.
- A workshop on disaster plans for special libraries.
- Professional activity tours to the National Library of Medicine and the Library of Congress.
- Information management issues on electronic documents, including collection, storage, and copyright issues.
- Optional training and workshops in areas such as the ETOH database and creating higher visibility and awareness of your library and information center.

We look forward to your participation!

SALIS Board of Directors

SALIS 2002 Presenters

ANN ACOSTA, M.S.W., works for the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention (CSAP) as a public health advisor. She has almost a decade of experience in the public health arena. Her experience includes project management, research, and writing. Currently, she is directing the development of interactive Web-based tutorials on substance abuse and program evaluation.

JANA ALLCOCK, M.L.S., is the Consumer Health Outreach Coordinator for the National Network of Libraries of Medicine in the Southeastern/Atlantic Region. In this position, she works with libraries to provide general health information to anyone touched by illness. As a coordinator, she oversees subcontract funding, teaches classes, exhibits at local and national meetings, and provides other outreach services in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia. Her previous position was at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences Library in Little Rock, where she worked as the Coordinator for Access to Electronic Resources and helped to build the consumer health collections and connections across campus.

AMELIA M. ARRIA, Ph.D., is the Deputy Director of Research at the Center for Substance Abuse Research (CESAR) at the University of Maryland, College Park. Her research interests include understanding the patterns of substance use, health consequences, and effective methods for prevention. She received a Ph.D. in Epidemiology from the University of Pittsburgh Graduate School of Public Health and a B.S. in Human Development and Family Studies from Cornell University.

ERIN ARTIGIANI is currently the Deputy Director of Policy and Governmental Affairs and the Coordinator of Lt. Governor Kathleen Kennedy Townsend's Drug Early Warning System (DEWS). Her duties include supervising DEWS research and educational outreach efforts; writing and editing DEWS Alerts and Action Plans; managing the DEWS Action Team, Steering Committee, and Emerging Drugs Training Network; and editing the DEWS News. Artigiani is also working with the Governor's Office of Crime Control and Prevention to develop a research agenda for the State and a new division to provide training and technical assistance to programs and communities across Maryland. She is a writer and editor of the biannual State Crime Control and Prevention Strategy and supervises evaluations of several programs including the Maryland Student Assistance Program and the Youth Strategies Initiative.

JILL AUSTIN, Ph.D., M.L.S., B.Sc., has been the Manager of the National Clearinghouse on Substance Abuse at the Canadian Centre on Substance Abuse (CCSA) since 1990. During that time, the Clearinghouse has developed a reference service, a national network of addictions libraries, several national databases, including CANBASE (the national database of Canadian addictions resources), and the CCSA Web site. She has a special interest in the issues involved in developing, managing, and searching full-text databases. She now divides her time between the CCSA and independent consulting.

JEAN LUD CADET, M.D., is the Clinical Director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse's (NIDA) Intramural Research Program (IRP), supervising clinical procedures and medical care for all human volunteers enrolled in research programs at IRP's Addiction Research Center in Baltimore, MD. Cadet, a psychiatrist and neurologist, is also chief of the Molecular Neuropsychiatry Section of the IRP's Neuroscience Research Branch. Since joining NIDA in 1992, Cadet has conducted clinical research into the effects of drugs on the brain, using behavioral neurology and neuropsychiatry approaches. In addition, he has conducted basic research into the neurodegenerative and neurotoxic effects of methamphetamine abuse.

JENNIFER CERULLO is working with project staff on the development of Web-based tutorials on substance abuse and program evaluation for CSAP's Prevention Pathways project at NGIT Health Solutions. Cerrulo is a recent graduate from the University of Maryland at College Park, with a Bachelor of Science degree in community health education. Her experience includes research and content development.

H. WESTLEY CLARK, M.D., J.D., M.P.H., CAS, FASAM, is the Director of the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (CSAT) of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. He leads the agency's national effort to provide effective and accessible treatment to all Americans with addictive disorders. Clark is a noted practitioner, author, and educator in substance abuse treatment; anger and pain management; psychopharmacology; and medical and legal issues. He has received numerous awards for his contribution to the field of substance abuse treatment, including the Vernelle Fox Award from the California Society of Addiction Medicine for excellence in Addiction Medicine, Education, and Public Service in October 2000.

SARAH DIJULIO is Vice President of Internet Advocacy at M&R Strategic Services. DiJulio coordinates online grassroots, public relations, media relations, marketing, and creative services. She has provided strategic consulting and training on online advocacy to major nonprofits; served as an expert spokeswoman about Internet campaigns for media outlets, including the Washington Post, CNN, Nonprofit Times, and The Nation; and led innovative and successful nonprofit online marketing campaigns. Before coming to M&R, she was program director at TechRocks (formerly known as The Rockefeller Technology Project), launching its online campaign division, which helped nonprofit activists use the Internet to increase their organizational effectiveness. While at TechRocks, Ms. DiJulio developed and implemented the innovative Internet strategy for the Heritage Forests Campaign, which recruited 300,000 activists.

LEWIS D. EIGEN, Ed.D., is a leading social marketer and educational technologist. Dr. Lewis Eigen is president and chief executive officer of Social & Health Services, Ltd. (SHS), one of the country's preeminent educational and health communications organizations. His experience spans the corporate world, and includes high school and university teaching and research, computer communications, and Government service. One of the earliest World Wide Web pioneers, he has held leadership positions in both the public and private sectors. Dr. Eigen has served as the director of the National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information and the National School Resource Network. With his extensive media experience, Dr. Eigen has appeared as a CSAP spokesperson on radio and television, as well as in newspaper and magazine interviews. Recently he served as the moderator for a Robert Wood Johnson "Think Tank" for Substance Abuse Prevention in Higher Education.

She handles the entire quality control process for the 150,000 records in the ETOH database, creates database procedure manuals, and maintains the Web versions of ETOH and the AOD Thesaurus.

ERIC MOOLCHAN, M.D., is Staff Physician and Director and Founder of the Teen Tobacco Addiction Treatment Research Clinic in the Clinical Pharmacology and Therapeutics Branch at NIDA's Intramural Research Program in Baltimore, MD. As a scientist, he develops and oversees research protocols, with a chief focus on nicotine and tobacco and a secondary focus on other drugs of abuse (cocaine, opioids, and marijuana). As a physician, he provides medical care and oversight for research studies conducted at the clinic. Moolchan is also Visiting Assistant Professor in the division of Adolescent Medicine and General Pediatrics at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. He has authored a number of authoritative scientific articles in the field of nicotine and tobacco research, as well as in the general field of chemical addiction.

JOHN NOBLE, M.P.H., has served as Project Director for the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information (NCADI) since 1996. Prior to NCADI, he held positions at the National Institute for Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism as deputy director of the Epidemiology Division and acting deputy director of the Division of Prevention and Treatment Research. Mr. Noble received a meritorious achievement award from the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration and a mid-career fellowship at Stanford University from the U.S. Civil Service Commission. Mr. Noble is chair of the American Public Health Association's Action Subcommittee on Public Health and Terrorism.

MARY O'BRIEN is the Library Coordinator for the Lura Lynn Ryan Prevention Research Library, part of PFI. She is an active member of SALIS, serving on the education committee and acting as past host for the annual conference. O'Brien has been with PFI for over 16 years, is a representative to RADAR Network, and is a leader in prevention librarianship.

SUSANNA PREPELICZAY has served as Web administrator and scientific assistant for European networking projects since 1998 for ARCHIDO at the University of Bremen. Prepeliczay is an active member of the European Association of Libraries and Information Services on Alcohol and Other Drugs (ELISAD) and is currently a board member. Prepeliczay studied sociology at the University of Bremen and is currently a doctoral candidature at BISDRO Institute for Drug Research.

CLAIRE RICEWASSER is a 15-year employee of Al-Anon Family Group Headquarters, Inc. located in Virginia Beach, VA. Her previous careers include secondary education history teacher, and city and regional newspaper circulation manager in central Illinois and Santa Fe, NM. She also has 9 years of experience as a local and State Al-Anon volunteer. She is a member of the American Society of Association Executives and has held a Certified Association Executive designation since 1996.

THOMAS ROUAULT has served as Director of TOXIBASE, the French national documentary network since 1991. TOXIBASE has been involved in many International projects. Since 1998, the evolution of the French policy on alcohol and drugs had important consequences on the TOXIBASE network. Rouault has been a SALIS member since 1997. An active member of ELISAD, he served as chair from 1994 to 1996 and he is currently a board member.

RUTH SANCHEZ-WAY, Ph.D., serves as the Director of CSAP, a component of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). Under her direction, CSAP promotes the dissemination of effective substance abuse prevention programs and promotes norms supportive of prevention of substance abuse at the family, workplace, healthcare, community, and national levels. Dr. Sanchez-Way received a Ph.D. in Public Administration from New York University; an M.S.W. from Fordham University; and a B.S. degree in chemistry from St. John's University, New York.

BARBARA SEITZ DE MARTINEZ, Ph.D., M.M., M.L.S., C.PP., is the Head Librarian at the Indiana Prevention Resource Center and a member of the RADAR Network Steering Committee. In the past, she has held positions as Chair and past-Chair of SALIS. A member of SALIS since 1990, she has presented papers at past SALIS conferences on demographic software, Web site design, and database design.

LAURA SKLANKSY, M.L.S., is PFI's Research Librarian and oversees purchasing new videos for the PFI library. She has a B.A. from Roosevelt University and an M.L.S. from Rosary College (now Dominican University). She has been a medical librarian for over 15 years, having worked at hospitals and academic libraries throughout the Chicago area.

SANHO TREE is a Fellow and Director of the Drug Policy Project at the Institute for Policy Studies in Washington, DC. The project works to end the domestic and international "War on Drugs" and replace it with a harm reduction approach that focuses on public health and safety and economic alternatives to the illicit drug economy. The intersection of race and poverty in the drug war is at the heart of the Project's work. Tree has also worked as a military and diplomatic historian and collaborated with Dr. Gar Alperovitz on The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb and the Architecture of an American Myth (Knopf, 1995). From 1996-97, he assisted entertainer Harry Belafonte in drafting his memoirs and continues to work as an occasional consultant for him on international issues. He was also associate editor of CAQ, an award-winning magazine of investigative journalism. In the late 1980s, he worked at the International Human Rights Law Group. Currently, he serves on the boards of the Common Sense Legislative Group and Project Underground.

She also serves on the editorial board for NIDA Notes.

SALIS 2002 Presentation Abstracts

In Order of Program

Opening Speaker

Presenter: Ruth Sanchez-Way, Ph.D.

Current research has shown that science-based substance abuse prevention is effective in not only reducing substance use and its precursors, but also in reducing the numbers of individuals who progress to become dependent. CSAP uses the latest technology (such as its Prevention Decision Support System), coupled with the latest scientific information on what works best with which populations (the National Registry of Effective Prevention Programs and Guides to Achieving Outcomes) in order to achieve its mission of bringing effective prevention to every community. In the truest sense, CSAP combines technology and science with service to promote success for communities.

Gender Difference Issues in Drug Abuse

Presenter: Cora Lee Wetherington, Ph.D.

In the past several years, the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) has been actively promoting a research agenda on women, gender differences, and drug abuse. As recently as a decade ago, NIDA funded virtually no research on gender differences. However, today NIDA supports research in this area in all of its major program areas. From research on etiology and consequences of drug abuse to research on prevention and treatment, NIDA-supported research is repeatedly showing that gender matters in drug abuse. The presentation by Wetherington will highlight some of the gender difference findings that have emerged in the past few years. Topics will include a new look at gender differences in the epidemiology of drug abuse, gender differences emerging in animal behavioral models, the role of the menstrual cycle, gender differences in the pathways and progression to drug abuse, and gender differences in treatment issues.

The ELISAD Gateway Project: Objectives, Scope, and Collective Performance

Presenter: Susanna Prepeliczay

The European Association of Libraries and Information Services on Alcohol and Other Drugs (ELISAD) started the project, "European Internet Gateway on AOD," in January 2002. The objective is to build a portal to quality Web sites in all European countries. The gateway is intended to serve the professional and general public. Its objectives are to provide direct access to Web sites in the alcohol and drugs area and provide some basic descriptive data on these Web resources in a thematic ordering system. Another aim is to enhance networking between European organizations and institutions in the process of research. Internet resources from 18 European organizations and projects will be collected and analyzed for their information content, to be catalogued in a searchable server database. The methodological framework is adapting international standards and results from the DESIRE project to ensure comparability. After the first project phase, an extension to international focus is planned.

CSAP's Prevention Pathways: Online Courses

Presenters: Ann Acosta, M.S.W., and Jennifer Cerullo

Participants will navigate through the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention's (CSAP) Prevention Pathways site. The site includes interactive tutorials on various topics, including substance abuse and older adults, program evaluation, and violence against women. The presentation/workshop will focus mainly on the tutorials. Other site materials including the evaluation technical assistance component and resources will also be included depending on participant interest. After the presentation, participants will have become familiar with the Prevention Pathways site and the content of the interactive online tutorials.

The Neuropsychosociobiology of Methamphetamine Abuse

Presenter: Jean Lud Cadet, M.D.

Methamphetamine (meth) abuse has increased considerably during the past 2 decades. The frequency of emergency visits due to acute meth intoxication has dramatically increased during the past few years. Meth intoxication has been reported to be involved in a large proportion of drug-related homicides in 1987. Twice as many coroners' cases involved meth than did cocaine from 1980 to 1988. Deaths related to the amphetamines are associated with assaults, suicides, homicides, accidents, driving impairment, and maternal-fetal and infant exposures. In toxic doses, meth can cause agitation, anxiety, hallucinations, delirium, psychosis, cognitive and psychomotor impairments, seizures, and death. Patients who are meth users can sometimes arrive in an unconscious state at an emergency department.

Prevalence and Correlates of Ecstasy Use Among Young Adults

Presenter: Amelia Arria, Ph.D.

Ecstasy use among youth has been increasing worldwide and in the United States over the past decade. This presentation will focus on epidemiologic studies documenting this increase and the implications for public health efforts for prevention and intervention. In addition, data will be presented from studies conducted in Maryland on the correlates of ecstasy use among college students, juvenile offenders, and rave attendees. From these studies, ecstasy use appears to be more prevalent in certain demographic groups and associated with high levels of previous polydrug use. Future directions for research on ecstasy use will be discussed, including inquiry into potential psychosocial risk factors and behavioral consequences.

Maryland's Drug Early Warning System (DEWS): A Statewide System for Detecting Emerging Drugs and Implementing Policy Responses

Presenter: Erin Artigiani

Maryland's statewide Drug Early Warning System (DEWS) is unique in its focus on detecting emerging drugs and its ability to develop and implement proactive responses to substance abuse. DEWS has three primary data collection components: (1) Offender Population Urine Screening (OPUS), which tracks drug use and urinalysis trends in arrested juveniles; (2) Drug Scan, a statewide modification of the national Pulse Check program, which interviews more than 130 representatives from education, health, and law enforcement programs about perceived emerging drugs; and (3) Analyses of State and local indicators of drug use. DEWS information is disseminated through a monthly fax, a newsletter, and a variety of reports, alerts, and educational materials. In addition to describing the development and operation of DEWS, this presentation will describe how DEWS information was used to develop and assess Maryland's response to a steep increase in ecstasy use.

Using the Internet for Public Policy and Advocacy

Presenter: Sarah DiJulio

Learn how tobacco-control nonprofit groups are using the Internet to communicate with the public and generate activism to promote tobacco control. Discover how to get beyond e-mail and use the Internet inventively to catch the attention of the media and public officials. From "viral marketing" to "flash videos," innovative new technology is allowing nonprofit groups to reach and mobilize the public in ways never before possible.

Work in Progress: Web Site Portal for Hispanics/Latinos for Information on Drugs, Drug Abuse, and Prevention

Presenter: Barbara Seitz de Martinez, Ph.D., M.M., M.L.S., C.P.P.

Dr. Seitz de Martinez is currently designing a Web site portal for Hispanics/Latinos (and others interested in this population) containing information on drugs and prevention. It is a collection of links to Web sites, organized by themes, with particular attention to information available in Spanish or Portuguese. Besides links to sites with information on drugs, she has added sections for families and communities, developing prevention programs, and research (including the SALIS Web site resource links, census and demographic statistics, and other more general research databases such as ERIC). One section includes Web sites with general health information. Another is devoted to children's wellness, with links to Web sites for children in Spanish and Portuguese.

Sharing Information About Al-Anon/Alateen as a Resource for Families and Friends of Alcoholics

Presenter: Claire Ricewasser

Recovery from alcoholism involves everyone close to the alcoholic. Ricewasser will inform participants about Al-Anon/Alateen's purpose and about printed and online resources and local services. Participants will be familiarized with preteen and youth (Alateen) and adult (Al-Anon) literature, and the Al-Anon Family Group Headquarters, Inc. Web site. Librarians and information specialists will be encouraged to include and to be familiar with Al-Anon/Alateen materials for families and friends of alcoholics as part of prevention/education and treatment resources. They will also be familiarized with Al-Anon's value as a mutual, confidential, community-based support program. Participants will be provided with demographics from the 1999 Al-Anon/Alateen Membership Survey and recaps from previous surveys so that they can understand the wide variety of relationships and concerns people have regarding alcoholics and problem drinkers. The audience also will be provided with interactive case studies, suggestions for displays, familiarization with how to contact Al-Anon/Alateen, and ample time for question/answers.

Workshop: Disaster Plans for Special Libraries

Presenters: Tom Mikolyzk, M.A., CAS, Mary O'Brien, and Laura Sklansky, M.L.S.

As witnessed last September, disasters can strike at any time and without warning. Fire, smoke, flood, theft, earthquakes, tornadoes, hurricanes, and other disasters can turn a valuable, unique collection into trash overnight. Most academic and public libraries have disaster plans ready, but few small, special libraries have taken the time to plan for the unthinkable. In this workshop, Mikolyzk and O'Brien will present two plans, developed for two prevention research libraries. One is in the heart of the River North area of Chicago, housed on the fifth floor of a historic loft building. The other is in a new ranch-style office structure on the outskirts of a smaller city. Both collections need plans, but no single plan will work for such diverse settings. Mikolyzk and O'Brien will have a template for SALIS member libraries to use to create disaster plans and will walk through the steps necessary to get a good start on developing a plan—just in case.

Hooked on Tobacco: Issues in Teen Smokers

Presenter: Eric Moolchan, M.L.S., M.D.

The recent rise in smoking prevalence among youth has sparked renewed interest in ways to address the tobacco pandemic. Adolescent smokers suffer the same withdrawal symptoms as adults, try to quit and fail, and are frequently interested in treatment. Yet, few studies exist of pharmacological interventions for adolescent smokers, and those studies have suffered from low participation, high attrition, and low quit rates. The Teen Tobacco Addiction Treatment Research Clinic helps meet the need for high-quality research on adolescent smoking cessation. Studies will span the basic sciences and clinical interests (pharmacology, neuroimaging, genetic markers of nicotine dependence, and novel treatment approaches). Already underway is a 6-month outpatient study to investigate the safety, tolerability, compliance, and efficacy in teenagers, of two different forms of nicotine-replacement therapy, in combination with counseling/group support. Some preliminary findings and their applicability will be discussed.

Are We Able to Deal with Prevention Goals in Documentation Centers (and How?)

Presenter: Thomas Rouault

For many AOD specialized documentalists the answer to this question is obvious because many documentation centers, and even regional or national networks, have been developed to support prevention strategies. But does that mean that prevention goals are always compatible with scientific information? How should documentalists coordinate this major goal with their center's framework? Should they assess prevention tools and the information content? This presentation will focus on key questions for information specialists, based on the 2001 ELISAD conference which addressed this issue. It will also provide information on recent European materials and projects in the prevention field. Finally, it will show how TOX-IBASE, the French national information and documentation network, has faced new prevention policy strategies and has tried to adapt its own services and methodologies to fulfill this important question.

Moderated Panel Discussion: Managing Electronic Documents: Collection, Storage, and Copyright Issues

Moderator: Sheila LaCroix B.S.C., M.L.S., Panel Members: Jill Austin, Ph.D., M.L.S., B.S.c., Leigh Hallingby, and David Man

This session will address the issues we face in collecting 'grey literature,' an essential and valuable part of collections in many substance abuse libraries. Many research and Government agencies and organizations have turned to publishing research, policy, statistical, and best practice documents electronically to save printing and distribution costs; some are no longer making print copies available. Not only are we faced with policy issues in collecting and storing these materials from other organizations, we are also faced with dealing with publications from our own and partner organizations, trying to raise awareness of publishing standards, and archiving issues. Members of the panel will share their experiences, concerns, and policies. Each will give a brief overview of his or her situation and then the moderator will ask a set of questions to be answered by each panelist. The panelists will have previous knowledge of the questions. There will also be ample time set aside for audience participation. Goal: To collect enough information from our collective knowledge and experience to compile guidelines that SALIS members can use in collection policy.

Training and Workshop Abstracts

Everything You Wanted to Know About the NIAAA Library and ETOH Database Presenters: Nancy Winstanley and Suchitra Mohan

This training seminar, given by the database producers, will include various aspects of the ETOH database. Special collections, such as “alcohol-related birth defects” and “college drinking” will be discussed and new ways of using the ETOH database and AOD Thesaurus will be suggested. Audience participation is welcome. At the end of the workshop, all participants should have a working knowledge of the fine points of searching the ETOH database and the AOD Thesaurus. An optional tour of the NIAAA Library in Arlington, VA, will be arranged for all conference participants at a separate time from this seminar.

The Squeaky Wheel...: Creating Higher Visibility and Awareness of Your Library and Information Center Presenter: Andrew Wahl, M.L.S.

The idea of marketing library services is not a new concept but one that has become increasingly critical for today’s information professionals. The world that libraries exist in has changed. Rapid technological changes combined with recent organizational downsizing and outsourcing trends have forced librarians to examine their roles and take a more proactive role in marketing the services that they provide. This presentation/workshop will help librarians focus on thinking and working on their library/information center from a marketing perspective. Basic strategies and tactics of how to effectively market a library and/or information center’s resources and services will be covered. In-depth discussion will include handout examples of marketing and promotion techniques, creating information audits, and designing marketing plans.

Pub-Med Training Presenter: Jana Allcock, M.L.S.

This training will be dependent on audience level of knowledge and experience with Medline or Pub-Med. Participants will be surveyed before the training and will receive a 140-page manual.

Professional Activity Descriptions

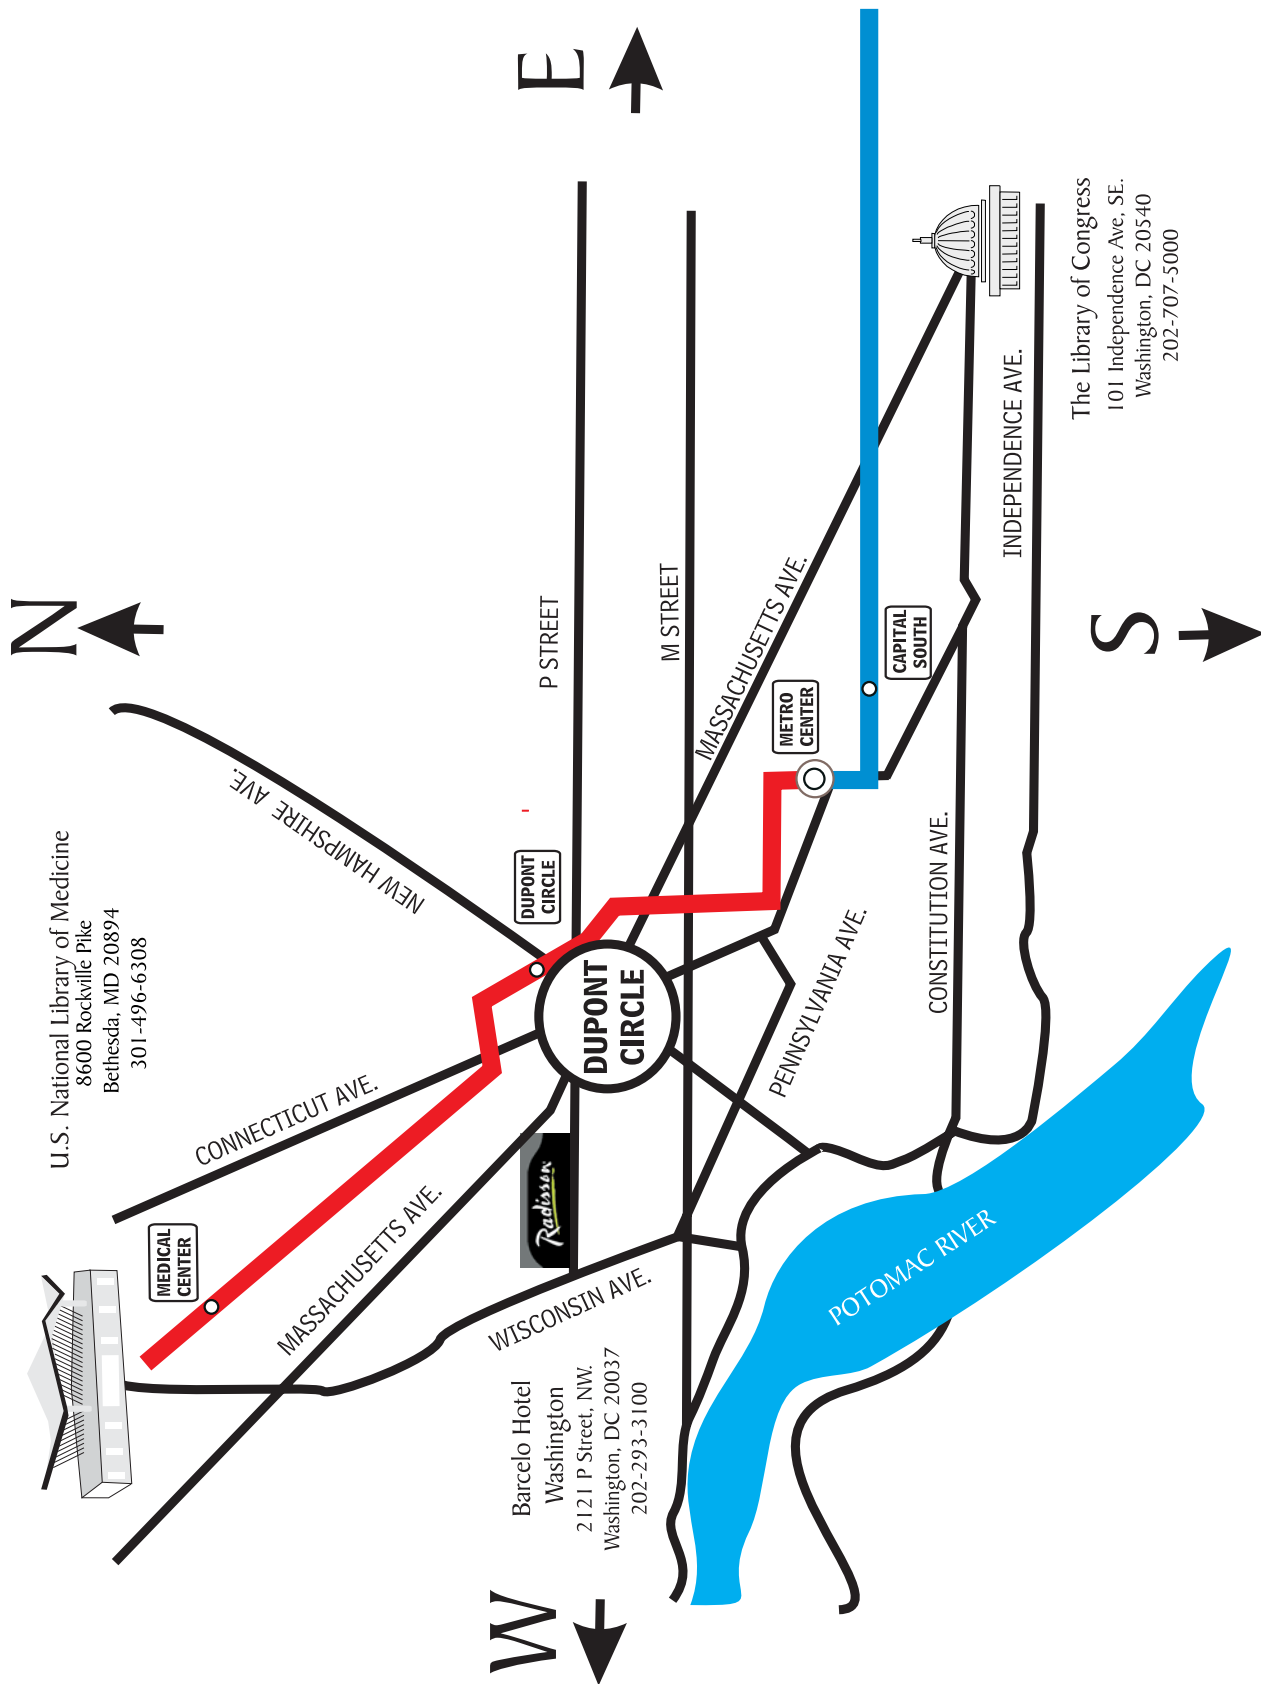

National Library of Medicine Tour

On Thursday afternoon, the National Library of Medicine (NLM), the premier medical library in the country, will be providing a special tour for SALIS members from 3:00-4:30 p.m. We will take the Metro from Dupont Circle to the Medical Center stop (Red Line). The Library is a short 10-minute walk from there.

The NLM tour will feature a 12-minute video about the Library; demonstrations of two interactive technologies, “Breath of Life” and “Turning the Pages;” a walking tour through the reading room and the computer room; a visit to the rarely seen underground stacks; a brief stop at “The Once & Future Web,” an exciting exhibit that chronicles the history of the telegraph and the Internet; and a demonstration of resources of specific interest to SALIS members available through NLM’s TOXNET Web site.

Library of Congress Tour

For our visit to the Library of Congress we will plan on joining the public tour at 3:30 p.m. on Friday. We’ll leave the Radisson Barcelo immediately after lunch and travel on the Metro to Capital South (Blue Line). From there it’s a short walk to the Jefferson Building, where our tour will commence in the glorious Great Hall. The Library of Congress is the Nation’s oldest Federal cultural institution and the world’s largest library, and well worth the trip!
